Front cover: World leaders in sport sixty years ago

Marise Chamberlain was a track athlete who broke or equalled world 400 metres and 440 yards records over three successive years 1957-59; she also won the bronze medal in the 800 metres at the Olympic Games in Tokyo in 1964, the only track medal won by a New Zealand woman at an Olympics. She also set unofficial world records over a mile and 1500 metres and was second in the 880 yards at the Empire and Commonwealth Games in Perth in 1962.

Pip Gould set world records for the 200 metres and 220 yards backstroke at the Newmarket Pool in Auckland in 1957 and the following year set world 100 metres and 110 yards records. She remains the only New Zealand swimmer to set world record times in long-course pools. She won the bronze medal in the 110 yards backstroke at the Empire Games in Cardiff in 1958.

Back cover: Six times a champion

On September 6 1968, fifty years ago this year, Ivan Mauger won the first of his record six world speedway titles, three of them in successive years. He rode in fourteen consecutive world finals. He also won other world titles, including three long-track championships. The picture shows him after winning his sixth title, in Katowice in Poland, and holding up a No 6 dossard to indicate his feat.

Chairman's Report

On a relatively quiet mid-week day I recently went around the Hall's premises to inspect and acknowledge new additions and modifications to existing exhibits. It was school holidays time and there were several groups of students with parents or older friends or members of family that were absorbing the material in the exhibits.

Revenue from these sorts of visitors has never been our primary source of income although the type of visitor I saw has always been a key target for the Hall.

Since 1999 the Hall has been located in Dunedin in the city's Railway Station, a building that has its own heritage status. When we were designing the Hall to be located in the Railway Station building and to meet the standards of the Historic Places Trust and the owner, the Dunedin City Council, we had a number of goals:

- 1) Provide memorabilia that is specific to an Honoured Member and to provide related and generic items relevant to the sport played by the Honoured Member.
- 2) Ensure that the memorabilia, artefacts and exhibits are attractive and interesting to visitors from both within New Zealand and from overseas.
- 3) To ensure that whatever is displayed is worthy and truly representative of the Honoured Members and their achievements.

In addition the challenge was to reflect the mission of the Hall: to honour, to preserve, to educate and to inspire.

In reviewing the years since I note that our principal funding sources back then were the Hillary Commission, the New Zealand Sports Foundation and the New Zealand Olympic Committee. Today we have a single primary source and that is Sport New Zealand. With the current entity, our focus as always is on achieving a longer term funding commitment than we have typically enjoyed. We acknowledge that in pursuing our funding goal that Sport New Zealand itself has limitations on the duration of its own funding and with a change of government at the time of writing of this report there will be a further element of uncertainty about what lies ahead.

One of the elements in the formative years of the Hall we did not predict would occur with quite so much impact as it has is the number of national sports organisations who would identify the Hall as the preferred custodian of their records and thus the custodian of the history of a particular sport (usually from inception or close to it) in New Zealand.

While we were always committed to chronicling the activities in those sports played by our Honoured Members it was the actual achievement of our Honoured Members that was our primary focus. Nevertheless we have recognised that none of the government funded museums in New Zealand consider they have a charter to be the custodian of sports heritage so the Hall has become this entity. Visitors will note upon arriving at the front steps to the Railway Station building that our signage now makes reference to our expanded role as a sports museum in addition to being the Sports Hall of Fame.

Over time the categorisation and storage of those records will create both personnel and storage issues for the Hall. We anticipate that with sufficient ventilation of our expanded role that the government through our principal funder will recognise and reward us in due course for our constructive stewardship of an important ingredient of our heritage as a nation with an overweight sporting streak.

As to adding to our exhibits I am particularly looking forward to Ron Palenski travelling to Texas in the first quarter of 2018 to uplift the personal collection of Sir Peter Snell for delivery to the Hall. We are very grateful to Sir Peter as we are with all Honoured Members for their decision to entrust the Hall with those special and cherished items. We will honour, preserve, educate and inspire with what is entrusted to us.

Two previous Ministers of Sport, the Hon Dr Jonathan Coleman and the Hon Trevor Mallard, have visited the Hall and demonstrated a wide knowledge and interest in many of the Honoured Members exhibits on display and have been enthusiastic in their support. Peter Miskimmin, the Chief Executive of Sport New Zealand, is active in his encouragement of our role and we are additionally grateful to his chair Sir Paul Collins, the Board of Sport New Zealand and its management for their wider support.

Stuart McLauchlan and the Management Committee continue to provide a regular and valuable monitoring contribution to the Hall and for which the Board is grateful.

As always we owe much to Ron and Kathy Palenski for another year of tireless contribution and our appreciation includes John Spicer and Helen Watkins also.

John Beattie
Chairman

These are people who mill around the merchandise area, quite often buying something or those who just want a chat and share their knowledge of champions of the past. Some stand at the entrance and point their cameras at a life-size figure of Jonah Lomu or at the kayaks Ian Ferguson and Paul MacDonald used. Others go through the Roll of Honour, which comprises photos and biographical details of all Honoured Members, or read every detail of how the 1888 Natives rugby team introduced the black jersey and the silver fern to the sporting world.

By whichever count, the auditable figure or the indiscriminate counter, the figures are pleasing and vindicate everything we've been trying to do for the past two decades. The idea in the first place in the late 1980s of establishing a Hall of Fame to recognise and remember New Zealand's greatest sports achievers was a good one; a large number of organisations fell in behind to make it happen but few have stayed the distance as the Hall has gone from an idealistic dream to a practical museum.

Naturally, we are forever grateful to the funders we have: Sport New Zealand is a successor organisation to one of the founders, the Hillary Commission, and it has remained with us. So too has the Dunedin City Council since answering the call for expressions of interest in 1997 when it was decided to establish a physical hall, a museum, rather than operate out of a rented office in Wellington to which there was no public access. Dunedin was the only city to respond positively.

We are grateful too for continued political encouragement with party alliance of no matter.

The Hall too has been the beneficiary of an increasing amount of memorabilia to the extent that we are rapidly running out of room. Honoured Members provide material, but so too members of the general public who think the Hall a better repository for grandad and grandma's old books and things than an unlooked-at drawer or, even worse, a tip. During the Lions tour, we were able to display the jersey worn by the Irish fullback, Maurice Finbar Landers, in the 1905 test against New Zealand in Dublin. It's in a private collection in New Zealand and was allowed out on loan to us for a few weeks. Landers and the New Zealand fullback, Billy Wallace, swapped jerseys after the game and Landers' came back to New Zealand in

Chief Executive's Report

The New Zealand Sports Hall of Fame passed a milestone in the year under review by gaining more than 10,000 visitors in a year for the first time. The final tally was 10,254, beating by a comfortable margin the previous highest of 9,838 which was recorded in our first year open in Dunedin.

But wait, as the infomercials say, there's more! The total was a strict record of those who paid to enter as well as 817 school pupils who were not charged. But for the first full year, we have been able to record the number of people crossing our threshold, that is, people entering the Hall but not actually paying to see the exhibits. That total was 28,512, as recorded by an automatic door counter. The figure can be only indicative rather than definitive.

Wallace's baggage. The Irish test, the second of that tour, was said to be where the now-widespread practice of jersey swapping began.

We also received during the year a comprehensive collection of athletics programmes to complement the already substantial holdings we have. Peter Snell, who bequeathed some of his memorabilia to Te Papa during the year, has indicated most of what he has is available to the Hall. We have had on display for some years now one of his gold medals from the Olympic Games in Tokyo.

For a while, we thought we were heading for a surplus for the year but accounting practices meant that the surplus became a small loss of $4,921. It was all to do with unused monies from gaming machine trusts being carried forward into the following year. We are of course immensely grateful to those trusts which support us, especially Pub Charity and the New Zealand Community Trust.

We continue our association with the Halberg Disability Sport Foundation which allows us to have our annual inductions as part of the foundation's annual sports award dinner, which is televised live on Sky. This association began in 2001 when our inductees were Sandra Edge and Martin Crowe. Our inductees in 2017 were Ruben Wiki of rugby league and Don Jowett, the only New Zealander to win a sprint event at a major games (the 220 yards at the Empire Games in Vancouver in 1954).

The death of Sir Colin Meads in August falls outside the strict timelines of this report, which is to June 30 2017, but I'm sure I can get away with acknowledging him and what he meant to New Zealand. So many eloquent words were spoken when he died and at his televised funeral service in Te Kuiti that it seems superfluous to try to add more now. But from the Hall's perspective, he was always a willing and courteous supporter and a frequent visitor, displaying a modesty that may have surprised those who did not know him. He was standing in the Hall reception area one day when a newspaper photographer asked him to move into the Hall and stand by his display. He looked appealingly to those he was chatting to, as if to say, "Must I?" Yes, he must, and yes, he did. Like others when the Hall was being set up, Meads generously offered both his time and his memorabilia. Meads was a memorable rugby player and man, and it's the Hall's role to ensure that is never forgotten.

The Hall's sympathy of course is extended to Verna, Lady Meads, and the family, as it is to all supporters of the Hall who lost loved ones during the year.

TVNZ 1 recorded a tribute to Meads in the Hall which was shown on the network news.

I record the Hall's appreciation of the work done annually and efficiently by our auditors, Cook North & Wong, specifically Malcolm Wong and Jan Clark. As always, I thank the Board of Governors and especially the chairman, John Beattie, for their continued good work; and likewise the executive committee and its chairman, Stuart McLauchlan. In an increasingly highly professionalised sporting world, their roles are voluntary and appreciated all the more for that.

I thank too those who keep the Hall going from day to day – Kathy Palenski, Helen Watkins and John Spicer. They all work to ensure New Zealand's sporting past continues into the present and the future.

Ron Palenski
Chief Executive

The following specific accounting policies which materially affect the measurement of financial performance have been applied:

Accounts receivable:

Accounts receivable are valued at expected realisable value. Bad debts are written off in the year in which they are identified.

Fixed assets and depreciation:

Fixed assets are recorded at cost less depreciation. Depreciation is provided at 20% using the straight line method.

Income is recorded on a cash basis.

Stock on Hand:

These statements are prepared on a GST exclusive basis except that accounts receivable and accounts payable are recorded inclusive of GST.

Changes in accounting policies:

There have been no changes in accounting policies. All policies have been applied on a basis consistent with those used in previous years.
