2018 ANNUAL REPORT

TO HONOUR . TO PRESERVE . TO EDUCATE . TO INSPIRE

Front cover: Mexico City Olympics fifty years ago

Scottish-born New Zealander Mike Ryan achieved one of the greatest feats in New Zealand athletics when he ran third in the Mexico Olympics marathon in 1968. The city's height above sea level of 2250 metres had a profound influence on endurance events and favoured champions were left gasping in the thin air. But Ryan, who had had no altitude training, doggedly planned and ran his own race for the bronze medal behind Ethiopian Mamo Wolde (from Addis Ababa, 2355 metres above sea level) and Kenji Kimihara of Japan, who had trained at altitude. Ryan ran the marathon at two major games (the Commonwealth Games in Kingston was the other) and returned with bronze from both. Ryan won the internationally important Fukuoka marathon in Japan in 1966 in a personal best 2 hours 14 minutes 4.6 seconds.

Back cover:

Theodorus Jacobus Leonardus Quax, known to all as Dick, died on May 28 2018, aged 70. He first came to national prominence in 1970 when he was second in the 1500 metres at the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh behind the champion Kenyan, Kip Keino. Quax's greatest athletics triumphs were the silver medal in the 5000 metres at the Olympic Games in Montreal in 1976 and a world record 5000 metres in 13 minutes 12.9 seconds the following year in Stockholm. His versatility is reflected in his best times – 3 minutes 36.7 for 1500 metres and 2 hours 10 minutes for a marathon, with world-class times for every distance in between. Quax later turned to coaching and event promotion, often with his great friend John Davies, the bronze medallist in the 1500 metres at the Tokyo Olympics in 1964.

John Beattie
Chairman

Chief Executive's Report

In one sense, the New Zealand Sports Hall of Fame made significant progress in the period under review. In another, the same old problem reasserted itself to the extent that any progress risked being overwhelmed by a lack of money.

There is ample goodwill for the Hall and for the general concept of what the Hall stands for – remembering and honouring our greatest sports achievers – but the goodwill is not backed up by people or companies willing to put their money where their memories are. Even some national sports bodies – and it could be argued we do some of their work for them by recording their past – have gradually dropped off the paid membership list.

The Hall began a major valuation project in the year to June 30 2018 and at the time of writing, that is continuing, such is the magnitude of the task. The valuer is a leading practitioner from Sydney who has much experience in the difficult task of valuing sporting memorabilia: some items may be valued by what prices are fetched at auction or other sales for similar items, but many in the Hall's care are unique so therefore the search has to be for comparable items. When considering the value of some items, the old rhetorical question comes to mind; How long is a piece of string? But it's in the Hall's interests to attempt to answer that question, partly for the purposes of insurance (although replacement in most cases would be impossible) and partly so donor and lenders know a realistic value of any given item.

During the year, with the approval of the Hall's board, I went to Dallas at Peter Snell's request and took delivery of most of the balance of his memorabilia. The Hall already had a gold medal of Peter's from Tokyo and smaller items such as a pair of shoes and a tracksuit top, and the rest of his medals had gone to Te Papa. The Hall now has other trophies including the plaque proclaiming him to be a member of the IAAF Hall of Fame, the only New Zealander to be inducted, such are the stringent qualifications. Among the material now in the Hall's possession is an extensive file of letters which date from Peter's competitive days so the Hall now has both display and archival material relating to New Zealand's "Athlete of the Century."

At a sports history conference in Sydney in 2017, several people including myself discussed whether an umbrella organisation for sports museums in New Zealand and Australia would be of any use. There was general agreement to give it a try and in Melbourne this year, the inaugural meeting of the Australian and New Zealand Sports Museum Network was held. The organisation and hosting of the meeting was thanks to Jed Smith and his staff at the Australian Sports Museum at the Melbourne Cricket Ground. It is the leading example of a sports museum in the Tasman world and is fortunate for where it is placed and how it is organised: the museum is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Melbourne Cricket Club and benefited in its setup phase by a grant of $25 million from the federal government. Staff there shared their expertise and experience with the thirty or so people who were at the meeting, which included visits to other sports-related museums in the Melbourne area as well as a "Real Madrid experience" which happened to be in Melbourne at the time. It was deemed such a success another meeting will be held in the ensuing year, this time based in Sydney and Bowral, the home of the Bradman Museum.

The acquisition of the Snell material and the experience gained from seeing others in a similar field led to a realisation that the Hall is in need of an overhaul. The single-member display cases, which began when the Hall was just in an office in Wellington, are not practical because they cannot easily be opened to be cleaned or for items to be rotated. There is a need for modern museum-style display cases which can be opened from the front and are of a light construction; such display cases would better utilise space in the Hall. However, as always, cost is the issue. There is also a need for the expertise of a trained archivist, if only part-time, to ensure the proper protection and preservation of artifacts; and for the provision of museum-standard materials to achieve this.

As part of the policy to record the history of Honoured Members, the Hall published a small biography of Joe Scott, the 19th century walker who became the first New Zealander to win a world title.

Sport New Zealand continues to be our major funder and its chief executive, Peter Miskimmin, takes an active personal interest in what we do. He is aware we are always in the market for more money at the same time as we express our gratitude for his support in the past. The Dunedin City Council, through a rent rebate, is our second-biggest funder and has been a constant supporter since we first considered moving to Dunedin in 1997.

We continue to rely on discretionary funding through gaming machine trusts and again express our gratitude to Pub Charity, Bendigo Valley and the New Zealand Community Trust. The Hall has twice made submissions to parliamentary entities arguing against the "localisation" of gaming machine funds, the policy whereby funds are made available only in the communities in which they're generated. The Hall's argument is that such a policy works against the interests of national organisations such as the Hall, which of course also provides a community benefit.

We continue our association with the Halberg Disability Sport Foundation which allows us to have our annual inductions as part of the foundation's annual sports award dinner, which is televised live on Sky. This association began in 2001 when our inductees were Sandra Edge and Martin Crowe. Our inductee in 2018 was Rob Waddell, the winner of the single sculls at the Olympic Games in Sydney in 2000 and also a world champion. (The Hall, thanks to the Community Trust of Otago, had been able to buy one of Rob Waddell's world championship boats several years ago. It loaned it to a local rowing club but recalled it a couple of years ago). The Chairman has remarked on the death of Honoured Member and trustee Dick Quax during the year; and congratulated another Honoured Member and trustee, Sir Bryan Williams, on his knighthood. John Beattie remarked at last year's annual meeting that surely no other organisation in New Zealand has been associated with as many knights and dames as the Hall has.

I join with the Chairman in extending the Hall's condolences to Dick's wife Roxanne and family; I also extend the Hall's deepest sympathy to John himself, for the loss of his mother, Norma, Lady Beattie, during the year. She took a close interest in the Hall's affairs and was a frequent guest at dinners.

I record the Hall's appreciation of the work done annually and efficiently by our auditors, Cook North & Wong, specifically Malcolm Wong and Jan Clark.

As always, I thank the Board of Governors and especially the chairman, John Beattie, for their continued good work; and likewise the executive committee and its chairman, Stuart McLauchlan. In an increasingly highly professionalised sporting world, their roles are voluntary and appreciated all the more for that.

I thank too those who keep the Hall going from day to day – Kathy Palenski, Helen Watkins and John Spicer. They all work to ensure New Zealand's sporting past continues into the present and the future.

All transactions in the Performance Report are reported using the accrual basis of accounting. The Performance Report is prepared under the assumption that the entity will continue to operate in the foreseeable future.

Specific Accounting Policies:

The following specific accounting policies which materially affect the measurement of financial performance have been applied:

Accounts receivable:

Accounts receivable are valued at expected realisable value. Bad debts are written off in the year in which they are identified.

Fixed assets and depreciation:

Fixed assets are recorded at cost less depreciation. Depreciation is provided at 20% using the straight line method.

Investments:

Investments are recorded at cost.
Income is recorded on a cash basis.

Stock on Hand:

Stock has been valued on a first in first out basis at the lower of cost or net realisable value after due allowance for damaged and obsolete stock.

Goods and services tax:

These statements are prepared on a GST exclusive basis except that accounts receivable and accounts payable are recorded inclusive of GST.

Changes in accounting policies:

There have been no changes in accounting policies. All policies have been applied on a basis consistent with those used in previous years.

Revenue:

Revenue from membership, admissions and HoF Merchandise are recognised in the Statement of Financial Performance at the point they are receipted into the Hall's bank account.

Other income is recognised in the Statement of Financial Performance as their services are provided.

Grants are recognised as revenue when they become receivable unless there is an obligation in substance to return the funds if conditions of the grant are not met. If there is such an obligation, the grants are initially recorded as grants received in advance and recognised as revenue when conditions of the grant are satisfied.

Income Tax:

No tax has been provided in the accounts as the society is exempt from income tax.
